THE PURSUIT of BEAUTY

Editorial

Somebody out there does not like people. Having neither regard nor pity for any but their own, they deem others but a pestilent blight upon their planet. Being obscenely rich and dangerously powerful has warped their minds and long ago sent them adrift from morality. They are a small group, but this small group wields tremendous power in this world, albeit covertly.

There are very few places where their merchants and minions cannot be found doing their bidding. Many have sold their souls to partake, for riches in the hand have a blinding power. And, sorry, but your governments will not help you. These elites have covered that, as well as the judiciary, police, health institutes, media, education, entertainment, and on and on.

Bereft of any regard for life, they could rightly be called a death cult. In 2024 alone, over 45 million of the unborn were killed in the womb. Euthanasia “takes care of the old.” Government-infused drugs take the youth. Big Pharma deaths contributes their toll to all ages. Wars wipe out our young men and genocides nations of people, while these warmongers rape countries of their resources, accumulating more filthy lucre and more power.

It’s death to a happy life for vulnerable children who are mutilated irreversibly by Frankenstein sex operations. It’s death to women’s happiness by being duped to forsake their traditional roles in life for bogus thrills. And many men, not destroyed in wars, have been immasculated, and flounder to protect the women and children.

All this, while the prophetic clock is ticking, and soon time will be no more. The hour is urgent and the need great. God is seeking for those who are sold out to Him and the great gospel cause. Tepid religion and half-hearted professors be gone! It’s time to push back the powers of darkness! “Up, ye chosen, up!”

ARMAGEDDON NEWS

REPORTED BY BRO. DANIEL EICHELBERGER

Our enemy hates human life. And his followers do, too. They try to be crafty and hide their sordid bloodlust behind camouflaged cloaks of pretend compassion and false concern. For the health and well-being of the mother, they say. A woman has a right to choose what happens to her body! Women's health care is a basic human right!

Codebreakers on the battlefield have long understood the true meaning and intent of these types of intercepts, and it doesn't bode well for the babies and children on the fields of Armageddon. Come with us as we explore the assaults on human life at various theaters along the front line.

Be Careful What You Pray For

Our first stop is Scotland, that once brave and proud land that stared down popes and threw down idols in the fires of reformation for the good of Christ's holy Kirk, only now to erect shrines to the modern Moloch, for in Scotland, the abortion clinic reigns supreme. One dare not touch its sacred cow, or encroach upon its unholy precincts—even within the privacy of your own home.

Last fall, Scotland enacted the Abortions Services (Safe Access Zones) Act. "Under the act," The Christian Institute reports, "people risk an unlimited fine for handing out pro-life literature within 200 meters of a centre, speaking to anyone about abortion, or praying silently." This includes conduct in one's own home, if the home falls within the sacred perimeter outlined by law.

According to The Christian Post, "A letter sent to residents in an Edinburgh zone stated: "Activities in a private place (such as a house) within the area between the protected premises and the boundary of a zone could be an offense if they can be seen or heard within the zone and are done intentionally or recklessly." Private prayer in one's own home may amount to breaking the law!

Does anyone know of a type of prayer that is unintentional? What have we come to when even the posture of prayer in one's flower garden can be viewed as a threat to the staff and patrons at the abortion shrine 199 meters down the street? Because, hell forbid anything but tranquility to prevail upon the already troubled consciences of women who abort their babies!

Such legislation is not unique to Scotland, but is now endemic to every country within the UK.

Rock, Paper, Scissors, Persons!

Next, let us journey to beautiful New Zealand, home of Mount Taranaki and millions of other legal persons. That's right! Mount Taranaki (now to be known as Taranaki Maunga), that enormous hunk of rock, has been granted legal personhood by act of Parliament. This means it has all the rights of a human being. It is all on paper, so it is official. The law was passed in response to lobbying by the Maori, indigenous peoples of New Zealand. In a speech to Parliament, lawmaker Paul Goldsmith explained, "The mountain has long been an honored ancestor, a source of physical, cultural, and spiritual sustenance and a final resting place" for the Maori.

LIFESITE News reports that New Zealand has also previously given personhood rights to a river and a piece of land.

Such a generous consideration by all good and conscientious Kiwis, we are sure! And we would think that, with such magnanimity, they would protect all human life with personhood. But we would be sadly mistaken. The unborn are deemed unworthy of such accommodation.

Abortion laws in New Zealand were updated in 2020 to allow for termination of pregnancy for any reason up to 20 weeks. For 20 weeks and above, at least two "qualified" health practitioners must agree that the abortion is "clinically appropriate." These changes were made to cut through the red tape and "reduce barriers to accessing abortion services," according to the Ministry of Health, which obviously wields some mighty big scissors—in more ways than one.

So, Kiwi lawmakers signed the paper that covered a rock. Scissors would normally cut paper, but who wants that? Rock trumps scissors, after all. And scissors are useful for cutting other living things. They dare not call them persons.

A Killing Garden (State)

Our last stop is New Jersey, USA, where Governor Phil Murphy is requesting an additional $2 million for the state budget to "help recruit obstetricians, gynecologists, and other providers of women's health care." This, per NJ.com. Codebreakers were on the alert. But they needn't have been, for the Garden State governor minced no words when he plainly stated, "I will certainly never back down from defending women and protecting their access to reproductive health care, and especially, their right to an abortion."

The cat was out of the bag. (But this is an unfair analogy. Felines love their kittens.)

New Jersey is hoping to capitalize on the exodus of abortion providers fleeing states where abortion bans and restrictions passed after the 2022 overturning of Roe vs. Wade have made their murderous practices onerous or practically impossible. The additional funding would be used to attract such providers by helping with moving costs and loan forgiveness programs. Abortion providers, you see, must kill. It is their nature. They cannot simply move on to more gainful employment.

The dog can't help but return to his vomit. (Again, another unfair analogy. Have you ever seen a canine's care for her little ones?)

These horrors have witnesses of the battle asking, "Are these people men or beasts?" Well, you can always tell a beast from a human in the environs of Armageddon. Beasts have more regard for their offspring, born and unborn. They are your judges, O ye wicked hordes! 📺

NOT SO PRETTY

Everyday personal care products, such as cosmetics and shampoo, can contain chemicals associated with asthma, allergies, hormone disruption, neurodevelopmental problems, infertility, and even cancer. They contain carcinogens, pesticides, reproductive toxins, endocrine disruptors, plasticizers, degreasers, and surfactants. Exposure typically begins in infancy, with baby shampoo and diaper cream, and continues throughout the lifespan. <sup>1</sup>

TOXIN	PRODUCTS WITH TOXIN	HARMS
(BHA) Butylated Hydroxyanisole	Makeup	Causes stomach cancer in rats, mice, and hamsters as well as liver cancer in fish.
Formaldehyde	Salon hair-straightening products and nail hardeners	A human carcinogen. Linked to nasopharyngeal cancer, sinonasal cancer, and lymphohematopoietic cancer, specifically myeloid leukemia.
1,4-Dioxane	Foaming products (shampoo, body wash), lotions	A "probable human carcinogen." In lab animals, high levels of exposure have led to various complications, including liver and kidney damage.
Parabens	Makeup, moisturizers, hair care products, and shaving products	Endocrine disruptors, possible immune or allergic effects. Increases migratory and invasive activity of human breast cancer cells in vitro. Parabens are linked with sperm DNA damage and lower levels of reproductive hormones in men.
Phthalates	Perfumes, hair sprays, soap, shampoo, nail polish, and skin moisturizers	Problems with reproductive development in male fetuses and prevalence of ADHD in children. Cause sperm DNA damage in adult men.
Toluene	Nail polish, salon hair treatments	Nervous system depression, neurobehavioral impairment, and upper respiratory tract irritation. With massive exposure, accumulation of fluid in the lungs and respiratory arrest may ensue.
Triclosan	Toothpaste	Prevalence of hay fever and allergies in children. Suppresses thyroid hormones in lab rats. Can lengthen duration and increase pain with certain kinds of ulcers.
(SLS) Sodium Laurethsulfate	Toothpaste, soap, shampoos, bath products, and moisturizers	Contamination with 1,4 dioxane may occur. It is an eye, skin, and lung irritant

ABORTION:

The Leading Cause of Death Worldwide in 2024

JONATHON VAN MAREN

Throughout 2024, the mainstream press woke up to a brutal reality: Despite decades of sinister fear-mongering about “overpopulation,” the world is experiencing a critical shortage of babies that will threaten our way of life in every way imaginable.

From The Guardian: “Birthrates are plummeting worldwide. Can governments turn the tide?” From the Globe and Mail: “Fewer babies are being born around the world, and not only in the places you’d expect.” From Euronews: “Greece confronts disastrously low birthrates in Aegean Islands.” From Politico: “The political shockwaves of America’s falling birthrates.”

The demographic crisis, which Mark Steyn warned about over a decade ago in his prophetic book America Alone: The End of the World as We Know It, is now recognized as a fact by virtually everyone. Despite this, there has been little introspection on the part of those who have been championing birth control and abortion for decades both at home and as a form of aggressive neo-colonialism in developing countries. And despite the fact that the abortion wars defined the presidential election in the U.S., and political debates across the West, the elites studiously avoid making the obvious connection between the dearth of babies and the abortion death rate.

But as Breitbart reported, abortion was the leading cause of death globally in 2024, “with a record 45 million unborn babies killed in the womb, according to data provided by Worldometer.” The numbers are excruciating and impossible to fathom. As of 12 p.m. on December 31, 2024, an estimated 45.1 million abortions were perpetrated throughout the year. For context, Canada’s entire population is 40.1 million.

The abortion death rate—or, more accurately, kill count—dwarfs every other number, including 8.2 million dying from cancer, 5 million from smoking, 1.7 million from HIV/AIDS, 1.46 million from traffic accidents, and 1.1 million from suicide. As Breitbart pointed out, the total of all non-abortion deaths is 62.5 million, “meaning that abortions accounted for just over 42 percent of all human deaths in 2024.”

In some countries this information is being actively suppressed. We are killing at least a country’s worth of people every single year. No other single fact explains so much about the upheaval taking place around the world. You cannot have war in the womb and peace in the streets. 📌

DISAPPOINTMENT

BRO. CHRIS LEPELLEY

I bring you closer to Heaven, though it feels like Hell when I’m near.
At times you need me the most,
even though I’m the one you fear.

I’m the last one you want to hear from,
but the first to help you hit your knees.
It’s never my intent to ruin your dreams,
but to first help you see your needs.

I’ll never get an invitation to teach at seminars,
Yet my doctrine pours like rain on the wounded and the scarred.

I was the mediator for 12 men
after the Great Mediator died.
I carried them to the Upper Room where they discovered He’s alive.

Through the ages, God’s children are tempted this temporary world to love.
The Master sends me as a prophet to help them see the world above.

“Sadness” is what many want to attribute to my name,
But gladness fills all my true disciples,
and they know I’m not to blame.

To the defiled and the wayward,
I’m the reason for their misery.
To the pure in heart with eyes of love,
I’m the bridge to their victory.

I’m your reminder that you’re not entitled, you must work.
If you know not yet who I am,
simply read the title again.

THE PURSUIT of BEAUTY

SIS. EDEL NEUFELD

Throughout history, the lives of women have undergone significant changes. So radical are these changes, that in many ways the modern woman has little in common with her female ancestors. No longer are we washing our laundry at the riverside or carrying water home from the wells or relying on manual appliances in the kitchen.

But the differences encompass far more than the technological advancements that have changed our lives. Society as a whole, and a woman's place in it, has drastically evolved through time. But regardless of how momentous the change has been in the lives of women, one thing has remained predictably the same throughout.

Women of all ages, and throughout all of history, have longed to be beautiful and desired. The pursuit of beauty is at the root of a girl's heart. Little girls are uninhibited in their longing to be admired. Twirling in their skirts, expectant eyes beaming, they openly ask, "Am I pretty?" And although this unconcealed desire to be beautiful and attractive becomes more disguised with age, deep in the heart of every woman, the longing to be deemed beautiful is never extinguished.

The pursuit of beauty has led to an abundant number of beautification methods. These methods are often extreme. Feet binding, eating arsenic, wearing dimple-making devices, applying radioactive lotion, and tattooing or piercing the face and body are only a few of the ways women have attempted to achieve a society's standard of beauty in the past. But today's beautification methods are no less extreme. Today, not only are we willing to go under the knife, receive routine injections, or implant foreign objects into our bodies in an attempt to reach society's beauty standards, but we now feel the need to use AI to enhance our looks by using a variety of beauty filters. It seems as though women will go to any lengths to achieve the goal of beauty.

But the willingness to undergo such drastic measures to achieve beauty does not stem from the innocent, God-given desire to be beautiful. Rather, this willingness comes from an intense pressure from society to fit the current ideal. Women face an inordinate amount of pressure to achieve a certain, specific look to be considered desirable.

One of the problems with the attempt to fulfill a society's standard of beauty is the fact that the sought-for look is ever changing. While some women have longed for paler skin, others have laid under UVA radiation to achieve a tanned skin tone. Once, the ideal woman was plump, with wide hips and small breasts.

This is in stark contrast to the beauty standards of more recent years. The "in" make-up techniques—hair colours, eyebrow shapes, not to mention clothing and accessory fashions—are also constantly changing. The result is a world of women who are endlessly and painfully pursuing beauty as elusively as if pursuing the proverbial carrot on a stick.

The pressure to achieve the current benchmark of beauty is so intense that the world is surprised when a woman is able to resist its influence. Pamela Anderson's recent decision to make appearances sans make-up is an example of this. The fact that she is appearing in public as her authentic self has made international headlines. How strange to live in a world where presenting oneself without a cosmetically enhanced face is seen as an extraordinary act of courage!

Sadly, this pressure to conform to a specific ideal of beauty goes far beyond only achieving a certain physical look. The beauty ideal also exerts pressure on today's women to be publicly sensual, sexy, and downright lewd at times. Although couched in feel-good messages about free expression and women's liberty, attaining this "freedom" has unfortunately resulted in women becoming mere objects of sexual pleasure, robbed of their God-given dignity and honour. In reality, this illusory beauty presented to us as the ideal has little to no semblance to true beauty.

While many have heard it said "beauty is pain," true beauty does not require its possessor to subject himself to painful or toxic procedures to attain it. It does not require its owner to be exploited and objectified in order to secure it. True beauty encompasses so much more than achieving certain physical traits or measurements.

Attempting to achieve society's criteria of beauty leaves its pursuers anxious, devalued, and ever afraid of losing the race to age. In contrast, true and authentic beauty engenders honour, respect, and serenity to both its possessor and its beholder. What's more, true beauty transcends age.

The Scriptures exhort women to be discreet, chaste, and modest (Titus 2:5; 1 Timothy 2:9). Many might feel that such exhortation is oppressive to women, stifling a woman's self-expression and sexuality. Nothing could be further from the truth. Rather, modesty elevates the ability for a woman to express her full and authentic self, without being limited and restricted to being a mere object of sexual enjoyment. Being discreet and chaste in no way obstructs her ability to express her God-given sexuality. Rather, it enables her sexuality to be expressed freely in the safe, non-exploitative, and uninhibited presence of a loving husband. Indeed, the Bible's ideal of a beautiful woman is the standard that truly enables a woman to reach the fullest expression of her God-given beauty.

It is difficult to express the feeling of finding such wholesome beauty after being surrounded and immersed with fake, plastic, and unnatural imitations of beauty. It might be akin to enjoying a deep breath of fresh air, or sinking into an embrace at the end of a long, stressful day. Or the feeling of returning home after a lengthy absence. It is the feeling perhaps best expressed with a heartfelt, "Ah! This, this is how it's supposed to be." Such is the feeling of coming in the presence of true, authentic, and noble beauty.

Even more difficult is attempting to describe the feeling of liberty when one stops chasing society's unachievable, ever changing beauty ideal in exchange for the pure, modest, and honourable beauty given to us by God. Once exchanged, the difference is striking. No longer does a woman feel as if she is merely perceived as an object of lustful pleasure, but she finds herself treated with dignity, respect, and wholesome admiration.

Oh, that every woman would find liberty from the oppressive rat race that is the pursuit of society's standard of beauty! It is time we stop telling the precious girls of today that they're beautiful just the way they are, while plastering ourselves with cosmetics and undergoing the plethora of beautification procedures in the attempt to achieve an unreachable criterion of beauty. It is time for this world to see an army of women rise up in demonstration of what it is to be truly feminine and beautiful in all our modest and virtuous glory! 📷

SANCTIFIED POWER

BRO. DAVID KAUFFMAN

Rockets to space, wireless global communications, artificial intelligence, to name a few things. Mankind has accomplished seemingly godlike achievements! Magical, spiritual, and powerful, because we are Godlike!

In Gen. 1:27-28, we read that man was made in the image of God and was empowered and commissioned to subdue, cultivate, and have dominion over all the earth and every living thing in the earth.

When man rebelled against God, he essentially ran away with the capacities and power God had granted him, giving Satan access to it. He took the God-given power and abused it by animating and empowering a different structure in the world than what God had intended. The scripture calls it the course of the world, or the orderly arrangement or system.

In Genesis 11, God beheld mankind in a unified effort building a tower in rebellion against Him. “And the Lord said, Behold, the people is one, and they have all one language; and this they begin to do: and now nothing will be restrained from them, which they have imagined to do.”

Unless He divided them, they would be able to achieve anything they imagined to do. Imagine that! What power!

What has this runaway power accomplished? Great things! But it has been tainted and can be a curse. For every forward step in the development and modernization of civilization, it takes us two steps forward in the sophistication and refinement of evil.

The problem is not that power is evil. The problem is when power is rogue power. Disconnected from its original source, it becomes corrupted and perverted, and unimaginably destructive.

This society has been shaped by the individualistic and self-deterministic message of Protestantism, which is the same message of the serpent in the garden, “Ye shall be as gods,” without being in subjection to Almighty God.

You can use your God-like power to build your own kingdom. You can choose how your power is used. It is your power after all.

The “Christian” world has bought

If the unification of rogue power in building the tower of Babel was limitless, how much greater is the full surrender and unification of the power of them that truly love God!

into this doctrine wholeheartedly. I can be a Christian and choose what I will do with my life, my talents, my business, my money, MY power.

The truth is that we have been given the power of choice. We can choose how we will use our power. But we do not have the choice of being a Christian and controlling our own power. It is impossible for our power to be independent from God without it being corrupted and, ultimately, wasted.

“Thy people shall be willing in the day of thy power.” Psalm 110:3.

There are a number of prophecies that foretell of a great manifestation of the power and glory of God in the earth near the end of time, such as has never been before (Revelation 16:17-18). A great enlightenment! For this, the Christian world waits, while each individual retains control of his own power.

The truth is, that the day of the revelation of God’s power is not disconnected from His people. “Thy people shall be willing.” This willingness is not an offering of some resources such as time or money. It is a living sacrifice of one’s entire being and potential to God—mind, body and spirit; a full surrender of all of one’s will and capacities.

God’s glory will be revealed simultaneously with the surrender of our collective power as Christians to God: with the unifying of the power of all believers into one effort. If God saw that the unification of rogue power in building the tower of Babel was limitless, how much greater is the full surrender and unification of the power of them that truly love God!

Herein lies the difficulty. How can our power truly be given to God and unified with the power of all His children? God has built a framework, a government, and dwelling place for His power: a location where we can bring our power to surrender it to God.

“And the multitude of them that believed were of one heart and of one soul: neither said any of them that aught of the things which he possessed was his own.” Acts 4:32.

It is no accident that the church in Acts saw a great outpouring of the power of God. They were a people willing to surrender to God all of their ransomed powers, and all they owned, even their very lives. Christian, can we do less? 🙏

Up, Ye Chosen, Up!

Bro. David Kauffman

The world is going to hell!
The nations are crumbling,
The people are crying,
The people are dying!
The people, the people are stumbling,
The whole body is sick!
The abyss opens and reaches upward,
The soul of humanity trembles,
Wakens from its stupor,
To face the night of terror.
It cries out to an ancient memory,
Of Eden lost, hope misplaced,
Salvation erased.
The collective drowning has come!
The rapids are near, the force is strong!
The pace is fast, the hand upcast,
It is the last!
As the world so loved by God,
Spinning out of control,
Quivering on the brink,
The last struggle of the common soul,
Its cry reaches the heaven,
Echoing its glory halls,
What of salvation?
What of reconciliation?
What of the vision foretold,
By wandering seers of old?
What of the age of seven sevens,
The jubilee when captives go free?
What of the mountains bowing,
The valleys rising,
The glory revealed, the abyss repealed,
The nations healed?
What of the ears of Sabaoth,
The prophetic oath of vengeance?
What of the feet of apostle and prophet?
Bringing divinity,
To drowning humanity,

Sowing beside all waters,
God's truth and favour,
Life, love, and peace,
A kingdom of endless increase
That shall never cease.
What of the trumpet blast,
Echoing to nations lost?
Them afar off, sinking fast,
Ready to perish in the dark.
Waiting for a glimpsing sight
Of redemptive evening light.

Open your ears, ye heaven,
Hear the cry of humanity's plight,
Lift up your eyes, ye chosen!
The fields, the fields all white,
A harvest of harvests, waiting,
Planning and thinking and looking,
Into mirrors of self reflection,
This moment expires now!
Comes the moment for doing!
Faith cannot be replaced,
Costs will not be erased.
Pressure and fire,
Wind and rain,
Blisters and sweat,
Labour and pain.
Dust and blood,
Is the name of the game.

Up, up, ye chosen, up!
In your hands the fate
Of nations now that wait.
The date is late,
The moment is now
For winds to blow.
Up, ye chosen, up!

Stop waiting for your trauma to clear before you start creating a better life for you and the world.

Get out of the trauma
trap, where you believe that you still “have a little more work to do” before you share your gifts with
the world.

The REMAKING Of AMERICAN WOMANHOOD

I GREW UP WATCHING THE Mary Tyler Moore Show, which, Wikipedia states, “helped define a new vision of American womanhood”—the happy, fulfilled, single, career woman. The intro song joyously promised: “You’re going to make it on your own!” Now, decades later, multitudes of women are, in fact, on their own, without a husband and either childless, or raising children without the father in the home. Are they really making it? The loneliness, depression, and emptiness say a resounding NO!

With the backdrop of the women’s liberation movement of the 1960s until now, this “new vision of American womanhood” has, and is, being aggressively promoted. Influenced by both television shows and Hollywood movies, the social landscape has markedly shifted.

If the television is anything, it is a propaganda machine;

a tool used for social engineering. “It is simply for entertainment,” some may remonstrate. Back in the 1960s, I naively thought the same. But the trail of repetitive programming (aptly called) reveals the intended agenda.

“Females are encouraged to work outside the home and to exchange their dreams of motherhood and family for the fun-laced pursuits of material items and never-ending good times in the big city. From the TV sitcom Laverne and Shirley to Elaine on the TV show Seinfeld, the patterning is simple...the female is imprinted with repetitive content that sees them without a family and always as the perpetual single female, chasing their material dreams and good times in the big city centers.”<sup>1</sup>

“Females are conditioned and socially engineered to be overly sexual, with the death of marriage as the end goal.” The empty promise of liberty has been dashed on the rocks. Conditioned as sexual commodities, noble womanhood has been derailed. Often women find themselves involved in a chain of noncommittal, cheap relationships, with the resultant heartaches.

The Netflix movie, Bad Moms is an example of programming “that inverts everything a female needs to be truly happy, healthy, and to love her life.” Partying, endless self-gratification, and sex are portrayed as the answer to all their dissatisfaction and problems. This sort of repetitive mind conditioning “reinforces changing for the worse, instead of changing for the better as a way to deal with life’s hardships.” Hedonistic pleasure does not secure happiness.

“Women are further conditioned to never be happy with their natural weight, their natural hair color, their natural bodies, their natural hair thickness or length, their current husband or partner, or their status level in life. Once dissatisfied with their real selves, they become vulnerable to this socially engineered depression and low self-esteem.”

There are also objectives directed at the male. TV shows like Seinfeld, Family Guy, The Simpsons, Three’s Company, and Friends model male behaviour that is weak, imbecilic, unmotivated, and unfocused. This beta male programming works hand in hand with the programs for the female. It is obvious that the powers that be are working to steer our entire society.

“Females are the new strength figures in most movies, easily dealing with stronger male adversaries, with superpower strength. From Super Girl in Avengers Infinity War to the never-ending supply of female assassin movies, this agenda is aimed at changing the conventional role of the female out of femininity/motherhood/softness and into more traditional male behavior within our crumbling society. Inching the female closer to this line in the sand can also help push the female more easily into trans-gendering herself into a male on all levels. The end goal of these various agendas is stopping the production of any offspring, or at least to slow it down substantially.”

If the television is anything, it is a propaganda machine; a tool used for social engineering.

“Women are born with everything they need, unless they choose to look into the black magic screens that surround them. Our modern tech screens are spell casting devices.”

Non-stop media propaganda has the single female believing she doesn’t need a man, and “the now weakened and absent men can’t protect her” from the mounting dangers in the world, “because of their social engineered weakness.” “Birth rates are plummeting, our children are being destroyed as the female cosmic force is tricked to run away from her natural charge.”

The agenda is quite obvious—the destruction of the nuclear family—which God ordained for both the procreation of mankind and the happiness and well being of both men and women. We are witnessing a defiant attack on God in this continuing battle of good and evil. 📺
